Material Changes

There have been no material changes to our firm's disclosure brochure since its last annual update on January 27, 2016.

However, we have updated this brochure to include that we now provide limited financial planning services as part of our annual 1% management fee i.e. at no additional charge to any client who requests financial planning. Please email or write us if you would like to receive financial planning services.

We also have updated this brochure to reflect, among other things, growth in our firm since its last annual update.

Please read this disclosure brochure in its entirety, and feel free to contact us if you have any questions.

Advisory Business

Northland Capital Management LLC is a fee-only investment advisory firm which has been in business since June 6, 2008. Christopher A. Erickson is the principal owner and president of the firm. Chris Erickson and Julie Johnson serve as investment advisor representatives. Chris and Julie are assisted by Cathy Moore who is responsible for operations.

Northland Capital Management tailors investment advisory services to the individual needs of its clients by understanding each client's investment objectives, financial circumstances, and stated risk tolerance. We deliver investment advisory services using discretionary trading authority. Discretionary trading authority means that we can buy or sell securities in our clients' accounts without receiving client approval for each transaction before it occurs. We actively manage our clients' discretionary accounts ourselves i.e. we do not outsource active management to outside managers.

We offer various model portfolios ranging from Conservative to Aggressive which are based on the principles of Modern Portfolio Theory, strategic asset allocation, and diversification. Each portfolio has asset allocation ranges for equities, fixed income, cash, and alternative investments that we must follow in our ongoing management. At the beginning of a relationship, we help clients select model portfolios appropriate for their financial situation, investment objectives, and stated risk tolerance.

We diversify our model portfolios across various areas of the financial markets. Our portfolios typically invest in multiple asset classes, countries, and industries. We also strive to be cost and tax-sensitive in our selection of investments. For example, we use Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs) extensively in our discretionary-managed accounts because we believe ETFs provide diversification in a low-cost, tax-efficient format. ETFs form the core of our model portfolios' equity investments. Our primary fixed income investments typically include government bonds, CDs, as well as ETFs and mutual funds which invest in government bonds, CDs, mortgage-backed securities, and corporate bonds.

When we update our model portfolios, discretionary trading authority allows us to make corresponding purchases and sales of securities in clients' accounts to reflect our new models. We request that clients notify us of any changes in their financial situations or investment objectives, because we might recommend a different portfolio in light of their new circumstances. Clients can limit our ability to purchase specific securities or types of securities in their portfolios, but clients rarely impose such restrictions.

As of February 28, 2017 we managed 367 accounts worth $70,718,245 with discretionary authority.

Fiduciary status:

Ever since the firm was founded, Northland Capital Management and its advisers have served as fiduciaries for its clients' investment advisory accounts under the 1940 Investment Advisers Act and subsequent court rulings. On April 7, 2016 the U.S. Department of Labor issued the Conflict of Interest Rule which imposed an additional set of fiduciary obligations on the firm and its advisers. Effective upon the "applicability date" of the Rule (originally scheduled for April 10, 2017 but this date might be delayed), Northland Capital Management and its advisers also will serve as fiduciaries for "retirement investors" under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act and/or the Internal Revenue Code.

Limitations on investment advice:

Our discretionary investment management is limited to publicly-traded securities in brokerage accounts. However, at our sole discretion and at no additional cost, we may occasionally provide advice to clients about asset allocation and investments available in their employer-sponsored retirement accounts and "529 plan" college accounts.

Financial planning:

Although portfolio management is our primary focus, if a client specifically requests financial planning services in writing, we will provide limited financial planning services. However, if a client requests extraordinary financial planning services (to be determined at our sole discretion), we may charge for such additional services at a rate of $100 per hour.

Authorized agent accounts:

Solely as a courtesy, we occasionally may assist our investment advisory clients as an "authorized agent" (but not as an "investment advisor") for other brokerage accounts in which our clients want to self-direct their investments or hold legacy stock positions. As an authorized agent we will enter orders given to us by a client and help with administrative tasks such as requesting funds from the account's custodian. However, it is important to understand that the client is in complete control of the investments in these accounts. Because we do not provide continuous nor regular supervisory or management services when we serve as an authorized agent, we are not responsible for typical investment advisory functions such as appropriateness of investments, diversification, performance reporting, etc. for these accounts. We receive no compensation when serving as an authorized agent for these accounts, and these accounts are specifically excluded from our Investment Management Agreements.

As of February 28, 2017 we served as an authorized agent for 42 accounts worth $5,493,746. These accounts are not included in the discretionary advisory account totals on the previous page, nor are they included in regulatory assets under management on Form ADV Part 1.

Fees and Compensation

Northland Capital Management is a fee-only investment advisory firm. We are compensated for our investment advisory services by management fees which are based on the value of our clients' advisory accounts.

Our management fees are charged quarterly in advance. During the first month of each quarter we instruct an independent account custodian to deduct our management fees for the current quarter from our clients' accounts and remit them to us. To calculate our fees, we multiply each advisory account's value on the last calendar day of the previous quarter by the account's annual fee percentage and divide by four. If a client deposits or withdraws assets from their account, we do not adjust the fee for the current quarter. Clients can terminate our services at any time by notifying us in writing. If a client terminates our services, we pro-rate and refund our management fee based on the number of days remaining in the quarter.

Our discretionary management fee is 1.00%. Our fee rates are not negotiable; however, at our sole discretion we occasionally decide to provide investment management services as a courtesy for no fee.

Our management fees do not include costs that other parties charge. These costs include, but are not limited to, brokerage commissions, bond markups, expenses inside ETFs and mutual funds, transaction fees, and wire transfer fees. We do not receive any portion of these costs. Additional brokerage information is provided in the Brokerage Practices section of this document.

In order to reduce potential conflicts of interest, neither our firm nor our personnel receive compensation from any other financial industry sources or services. However, given that our fees are determined by the values of the accounts we manage, we have a conflict of interest when we recommend that investors retain us to manage their investment assets because we will receive fees for subsequent investment management services. An example of such a situation is if we were to recommend an investor roll over their 401(k) to an IRA which we would manage for a fee. We have a similar conflict of interest when discussing whether clients should liquidate assets that we currently manage for other uses such as reducing debt or donating to charity.

As mentioned previously, we also provide financial planning services. Limited financial planning services are available upon receiving a client's written request at no additional charge. Extraordinary financial planning services (to be determined at our sole discretion) may be billed at a rate of $100 per hour.

Performance-Based Fees and Side-by-Side Management

We do not charge performance-based fees. In a performance-based fee arrangement, an advisor typically charges a fee based on a share of a client's capital gains or capital appreciation, instead of or in addition to a fee based on the value of their account. Our fees are based solely on account value.

Types of Clients

Our clients are primarily individual investors, trusts, and pension plans.

Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies, and Risk of Loss

Discretionary-Managed Accounts:

We construct investment portfolios by diversifying across many areas of the financial markets. Our discretionary-managed portfolios invest in multiple asset classes, countries, and industries. We generally manage our discretionary portfolios with a “top-down” process. Top-down managers create portfolios by investing in broad segments of the financial markets which they believe offer attractive investment potential, as opposed to “bottom-up” managers who typically create portfolios by selecting individual company stocks and bonds.

Our portfolios typically consist of a core “market capitalization weighted” global stock ETF, plus other ETFs which implement various “factor” or “smart-beta” investment strategies. Factor and smart-beta strategies place additional emphasis on stocks with certain characteristics which over time have performed better than traditional market capitalization weighted ETFs. The primary factor our portfolios utilize is the “value” factor. Value factor strategies typically own investments that are undervalued relative to historical market averages, anticipating the investments may return to higher levels that are closer to historical norms. The primary smart-beta investment strategy our portfolios utilize is a “fundamentally-weighted” strategy which weights investments within each ETF based on a company’s fundamentals (sales, profits, etc.) as opposed to weighting investments based on market capitalization.

Our primary fixed income investments typically include government bonds, CDs, as well as ETFs and mutual funds which invest in government bonds, CDs, mortgage-backed securities, and corporate bonds.

Finally, markets are cyclical, so we prefer to buy after prices have declined or during periods of poor relative performance when we believe there is a greater margin of safety. We try to be “fearful when others are greedy and greedy when others are fearful.” We usually hold investments for many months to a few years. However, if an opportunity presents itself, we are not opposed to taking a quick profit or trading part of a portfolio more actively depending on market conditions.

Risks:

Our discretionary-managed accounts are diversified across multiple investments, and the values of these accounts typically fluctuate in a manner consistent with their asset allocation, degree of factor tilt, degree of smart-beta implementation, and prevailing market conditions. Some significant material risks of our investment platform include:

- Investment strategy risk – Our portfolios typically own ETFs designed to implement various factor-based and smart-beta investment strategies. Sometimes these strategies perform better than the broad stock market and sometimes they perform worse. For that matter, it is possible that these strategies could lose money in an up year for the broad stock market, and vice versa.
- Manager risk – Our clients (particularly clients with discretionary-managed accounts) assume “manager risk” or “selection risk.” The profitability of our portfolios is partly determined by our ability to predict future prices of investments and the quality of our decision making. Although we are generally pleased with our discretionary portfolios’ past performance, we cannot make any assurances about how they will perform in the future. Clients who wish to reduce manager risk should consider placing some of their assets with another investment advisor.
- Key person risk – Our firm maintains a Business Continuity Plan designed to mitigate a variety of risks, including the potential of Chris Erickson’s inability to fulfill his duties. If this situation were to occur, management of the firm would transition to Julie Johnson which could impact the firm’s level of service and investment performance.
- Custodial risk – We recommend and request that any brokerage accounts we manage be held by National Financial Services LLC (NFS), a subsidiary of Fidelity. Industry regulations require that our clients’ brokerage accounts be segregated from Fidelity’s corporate accounts; however, we are not in a position to monitor Fidelity’s ongoing compliance with industry regulations as that is in the domain of securities regulators. Fidelity accounts have additional protection through the Securities Investor Protection Corporation, as well as “excess SIPC” insurance to potentially cover certain amounts over SIPC limits. However, it is possible that NFS/Fidelity could fail and depending on the circumstances at the time, our clients could experience losses greater than what Fidelity, the SIPC, and excess SIPC insurance are able or willing to bear. Clients who wish to reduce custodial risk should consider placing some of their investment assets with another brokerage firm outside of our management.
- Counterparty risk – Counterparty risk is the risk that another party or financial institution will not honor its obligations. One way to reduce counterparty risk is to diversify one’s assets across various participants in the financial industry (brokerage firms, banks, insurance companies, etc.) Another way to reduce counterparty risk is to own tangible assets outside of the financial system such as real estate, gold, currency, fine art, etc.
- Systemic risk – The global financial system runs on debt. Many large financial institutions which are critical to the financial system depend on the continuous availability of debt to finance their operations. These institutions often are highly leveraged (i.e. they have much more debt than equity) which increases the instability of the financial system. A leveraged financial system, dependent on debt, is susceptible to periodic crises and occasionally requires intervention from a willing government to support it. It is critical to understand that a successful investment in a portfolio of stocks and bonds depends on a functional financial system and infrastructure. All portfolios including traditionally conservative portfolios can experience significant temporary or permanent losses during a period of financial system instability. Some events that could put the financial system at risk include a failure of the Depository Trust and Clearing Corporation which settles over a quadrillion dollars of securities transactions annually, a default in the derivatives market, a disorderly default (or the fear of a default) of a systemically-important country or financial institution, problems in the securities lending process, an inability or unwillingness of major market participants to perform normal business functions, cyber-attacks, communications network failures, power grid failures, pandemics, etc.

In addition to experiencing a potential significant decline in account value, clients might not be able to access their funds during these circumstances.

Investing in securities also involves risks inherent to each particular security. Some significant material risks of the securities in which we invest include:

- Equities – The prices of equity securities are affected by changes in a company’s expected profitability, economic conditions, market conditions, geopolitical events, investor psychology, interest rates, etc.
- Fixed income – The prices of fixed income securities are affected by changes in interest rates, risk of default, economic conditions, market conditions, investor psychology, etc.
- Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs) – ETFs that invest in equities or fixed income securities possess the same risks as their underlying equity or fixed income investments described above. Although ETFs trade on various stock exchanges, there is no guarantee that an active market for ETFs will continue. ETFs also can trade at prices above or below the fair market value of the investments owned by the ETF. Clients receive prospectuses for ETFs which discuss their risks in greater detail.
- Open-end mutual funds – Mutual funds that invest in equities or fixed income securities possess the same risks as their underlying equity or fixed income investments described above. During extreme market conditions, open-end mutual funds also may trade at prices above or below the fair market value of the investments owned by the mutual fund. Most open-end mutual funds only can be purchased or sold at the end of the trading day. Clients receive prospectuses for mutual funds which discuss their risks in greater detail.
- Foreign investments – Some securities invest in foreign companies or governments. These securities involve additional risks such as nationalization and currency exchange rate fluctuations.

Finally, although we have attempted to identify the primary material risks of investing with us, it is simply not possible to list every conceivable risk of our investment strategies and of the securities in which we may decide to invest. Investing involves a risk of loss that clients should be prepared to bear.

Disciplinary Information

We are required to disclose if there are legal or disciplinary events that are material to a current or prospective client’s evaluation of our advisory business or the integrity of our management. We have no legal or disciplinary events to disclose.

Other Financial Industry Activities and Affiliations

Management fees are Northland Capital Management's sole source of income. In turn, Northland Capital Management is Chris Erickson's and Julie Johnson's sole source of business income. Northland Capital Management, Chris Erickson, and Julie Johnson do not receive compensation from any other financial industry activities or affiliations. In other words, we do not also receive brokerage commissions, we do not also sell insurance or insurance-based investments, nor do we have nor recommend proprietary products. Such other activities are conflicts of interest and are present at many other financial firms.

Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions, and Personal Trading

As a fee-only investment advisor, Northland Capital Management is held to a fiduciary standard. One way we endeavor to fulfill our fiduciary duty is through our Code of Ethics. Our Code of Ethics requires that we place our clients' interests first, not take inappropriate advantage of our position, monitor our employees' personal investments and trading, prohibit insider trading, maintain a high standard of business conduct, comply with securities laws, require pre-approval for giving and receiving gifts over $250, etc. We would be pleased to provide a copy of our Code of Ethics to current or prospective clients upon request.

We typically buy or sell for ourselves the same investments that we recommend to our clients; however, we typically do not buy or sell the same investment for ourselves earlier in the day before we buy or sell for our clients. Under a discretionary trading agreement, our firm's personnel typically participate concurrently with our clients in aggregated block trades provided that availability of supply is not limited. If supply is limited, our firm's supervised persons shall not receive any part of the allocation until all clients have received their entire allocations.

Brokerage Practices

We recommend and request that our clients use Fidelity as custodian for any accounts we manage. We also recommend and request that our clients execute their brokerage transactions through Fidelity. Fidelity is one of the largest investment firms in the U.S.

We recommend Fidelity primarily because of their status as a family-owned and employee-owned company, access to a wide variety of investments, competitive pricing, and demonstrated quality in executing large securities orders. We believe Fidelity provides our clients with the best overall value.

Research and Other Soft Dollar Benefits:

In our business we interact with vendors such as brokerage firms and mutual fund companies which affect our clients' investment experience. Some investment advisors allow their vendors to pay for business expenses such as investment research that they could pay for themselves. In return, the investment advisor agrees to generate a certain amount of commissions from their clients' accounts for the brokerage firm. These "soft dollar" relationships can cause clients to pay higher commissions than they otherwise would. We do not participate in these arrangements.

However, in our industry, it is common practice for brokerage firms such as Fidelity to provide firms our size with services that help us manage our clients' accounts. At no cost to us, Fidelity provides us with:

- a secure website to view our clients' account information, calculate the size of potential orders, and transmit orders for execution,
- access to a dedicated trading desk for investment advisory firms,
- the ability to allocate aggregated trade orders across multiple client accounts,
- a service team to call with account-related questions,
- the ability to debit management fees from clients' accounts and remit them to our firm, and
- financial market commentaries via newsletters and conference calls.

Our receipt of these account management services at no cost from Fidelity creates a conflict of interest. Nevertheless, the fact that Fidelity (and many of its competitors) offers these services at no cost to firms our size has no bearing on our recommendation of Fidelity for our clients' accounts.

Brokerage for Client Referrals:

We do not accept client referrals from Fidelity, mutual fund companies, or ETF issuers. This is to eliminate a potential conflict of interest. If we were to accept referrals from Fidelity, our clients might believe that we recommend Fidelity because it is best for our business instead of best for our clients. Similarly, if we were to accept referrals from mutual fund companies or ETF issuers, our clients might believe that we select investments that are best for our business instead of best for our clients.

Directed Brokerage:

We typically execute our clients' securities orders through Fidelity because we believe Fidelity provides our clients with the best overall value in terms of execution quality, commission rates, and various other factors. However, if a client wants us to execute their orders through another brokerage firm, we will attempt to honor their request. Not all advisors require their clients to direct their securities transactions to a particular firm, and neither do we. If a client wants us to execute their securities transactions with another brokerage firm, clients should realize that another firm's commissions, transaction fees, or execution capabilities might be inferior to those of Fidelity or other brokerage firms. Directing orders to another brokerage firm actually could increase a client's cost.

Although we believe Fidelity provides our clients with the best overall value, Fidelity's commissions, bond spreads, and fees could be higher or lower than those of its competitors on any given transaction. If in the future we conclude that Fidelity no longer provides our clients with the best overall value, we are free to recommend that our clients change brokerage firms.

We do not receive any compensation from commissions our clients pay to Fidelity or any other firm.

Order Aggregation:

When we decide to buy or sell an investment for multiple clients, in particular when making changes in our model portfolios, we typically aggregate all of our clients' orders into one order and allocate the order on a pro-rata basis across client accounts based on account value. All clients who participate in an aggregated order receive the same price, so no client receives a better price than another. When calculating the pro-rata allocation, if we believe a client will be depositing/withdrawing funds to/from their account in the near future, we also may include the anticipated deposit/withdrawal in our calculations to reduce the number of securities transactions the client might otherwise incur. Exceptions to our typical order aggregation practice do occur, such as when a client calls us to request funds and we need to sell securities to satisfy their withdrawal after we already have placed an aggregated order for the same security earlier in the day, when we are rebalancing a small number of accounts, etc.

Review of Accounts

Every month we review the investments in, and the performance of, all of our clients' discretionary-managed accounts. We also examine these accounts for deviations from our model portfolios and make adjustments as we deem appropriate. Chris Erickson, President of Northland Capital Management, conducts these reviews with the assistance of Julie Johnson, Investment Advisor Representative, and Cathy Moore, Operations Manager.

Staying connected to all of our clients is a priority at Northland Capital Management. Every three months we send our advisory clients a letter that discusses their portfolio's performance. We also formally contact our advisory clients every year to review their portfolio in light of potential changes to their financial situation or investment objectives. Clients should contact us immediately if there are any changes to their financial circumstances or investment objectives.

We do not review accounts for which we serve only as an authorized agent and are not responsible for the investment strategy.

Client Referrals and Other Compensation

While we welcome referrals of potential clients to our firm, we do not accept referrals from vendors such as independent custodians, brokerage firms, mutual fund companies, etc. This is to ensure that our vendor selections, which ultimately affect our clients, are not influenced by potential referral activities. Our decisions and recommendations are based on what we believe is best for our clients, not what might be best for our business. We also do not receive any payments for referring our clients to other firms such as insurance agents, accountants, etc.

Custody

We do not maintain physical custody of client funds or securities. Client funds and securities are held by Fidelity, an independent qualified custodian. However, we are deemed to have limited custody of client funds and securities because Fidelity debits our management fees directly from our clients' accounts and remits them to us based on our instructions. We also may have custody of client funds and securities in situations where clients' Fidelity account agreements give us the authority to direct Fidelity to transfer funds or securities to pre-specified third-party accounts under a signed standing letter of authorization.

Fidelity provides our clients with monthly account statements. We urge you to carefully review Fidelity's account statements and compare them with any information you receive from us. If you believe there are any discrepancies, or if you do not receive your account statements on a timely basis, please contact us immediately.

Investment Discretion

Our firm regularly uses discretionary trading authority to manage our clients' accounts. Clients must sign our Discretionary Investment Management Agreement which includes a limited power of attorney before we can accept discretionary trading authority. However, we must follow the asset allocation ranges specified in the agreement. Clients also can limit our ability to purchase specific securities or types of securities, but clients rarely impose such restrictions.

Voting Client Securities

Our clients occasionally receive proxies or solicitations from Fidelity or transfer agents. Proxies allow clients to vote on matters regarding their investments. Please feel free to call us if you have questions about any proxies you receive. We do not vote proxies for our clients.

Financial Information

Northland Capital Management does not have any debt, nor do we plan to incur any debt in the future. We have no financial obligations that would impair our ability to meet our contractual commitments to our clients. Every year we prepare an unaudited balance sheet which we would be pleased to share with clients or prospective clients upon request.

Requirements for State-Registered Advisers

Chris Erickson is the principal owner and president of Northland Capital Management. Information about his formal education and recent business background can be found in his Form ADV Part 2B. Similarly, information about Julie Johnson's formal education and recent business background can be found in her Form ADV Part 2B. All required information describing Northland Capital Management's business activities and fee schedule is provided earlier in this document.

Neither Northland Capital Management nor Chris Erickson nor Julie Johnson has been involved or found liable in any arbitration awards, civil proceedings, self-regulatory organization proceedings, or administrative proceedings. Similarly, neither Northland Capital Management nor Chris Erickson nor Julie Johnson has any relationships or arrangements with issuers of securities.

Privacy Policy

Northland Capital Management LLC is committed to protecting our clients' privacy. To protect our clients' personal information from unauthorized access, we use security measures that comply with federal law. These measures include computer safeguards, secured files, and secured buildings.

During the course of business we collect various types of personal information such as social security numbers, birthdates, income, net worth, account balances, etc. We typically collect this personal information when you enter into an investment advisory agreement with us and in our subsequent discussions.

For our everyday business purposes, we will only share your personal information with others to the extent necessary to service your account and to respond to auditors, regulators, or law enforcement authorities. You may not limit this type of information sharing.

Except for the reasons described above, we do not share your personal information with anyone. We do not share your information with other companies so they can market to you, we do not jointly market with other companies, and we do not have any affiliates with which to potentially share your information. We do not even share your information with others to help us market to you. If we were to share your personal information for some of these purposes, you would have the right to limit or opt-out of these types of information sharing.

Please feel free to call us at 218-722-0559 if you have any questions.
